The Last Post is played before the coffin is taken from the United Synagogue's main hall to Hillsborough Crematorium. TRAVELLERS from around the world have taken a day to remember the three British sailors killed in a freak attack in the Suez Canal. The solemn procession, which paused at the crash site at the entrance to the canal on Sunday, came to a halt at the United Synagogue's main hall in Liverpool after the funeral of Ensign Jon Rosenblatt. The 16-year-old sailor and his two shipmates died after being shot and stabbed by terrorists at about midnight on Friday after serving with the 16th Royal Marines at Rasheed Airbase in the Sinai. The 21-year-old reservist, Serjeant Liam Piggin, who was an experienced cyclist and a keen runner, was the only surviving Briton of the three men. The boat carrying their bodies - after the three sailors were denied a Muslim burial - left the Egyptian port of Alexandria at about 9am. Three years ago, 22-year-old Liam ran to his death from a hijacked Italian ferry from the same Egyptian port. The haunting photo of his last moments, with Liam and his pal David at his side, is still on the walls of the synagogue. In the salute to Ensign Rosenblatt, Michael Brown, a former member of the Royal Marines, said: "There are not many naval officers that I would have said was the average war hero, but Ensign Jon Rosenblatt was. "Ensign Rosenblatt was a war hero in every sense of the word. You met more people that wanted to shoot someone like Ensign Rosenblatt on the street than you did a war hero."
